Here's Your Chance to Own A Piece of S&G History in the Making

How would you like to own one of the first two hundred S&G® model 2937 locks ever made?

Sargent and Greenleaf recently announced the new S&G® Model 2937 mechanical combination lock. This lock is designed to meet Federal Specification FF-L-2937, a stringent new specification intended to secure government weapons safes, field safes and other containers used for storage of non-classified materials. Today, the 2937 lock is the only lock that has been tested and approved to meet this specification. The 2937 lock is destined to become a part of S&G's long heritage of providing locks to the U.S. Government. Locks like the venerable S&G® 8400/8550 MP® locks, the 833 Padlock and the 8077 padlock.

For a limited time, S&G is offering you the chance to own one of the first two hundred Model 2937 locks ever made. Each lock carries an imprinted number (ie.200-090) indicating its number in the series. The lock comes to you mounted on an attractive stand with a brass nameplate. Every lock also includes a signed Certificate of Authenticity guaranteeing that it was one of the first 200 ever made.

For only $499.00* you can add one of these limited edition S&G® model 2937 locks to your collection. Like the other S&G® government locks before it, the Model 2937 is destined to take its rightful place in the history of S&G. Be one of the few to own one of these special locks.
